

I REPRESENT over 750 MATHEMATICS EDUCATORS IN THE STATE of MICHIGAN TODAY IN OPPOSITION of 201

Michigan Academic Standards - Talking Points - March 2017- v2.0

HB 4192

I HAVE INCLUDED THEIR NAMES & COMMENTS ON THIS BILL.

1. Passing HB 4192 will cause major disruptions for all local districts and public school academies, and the students they serve. Critical time, energy, and funding which would have been focused on student learning will be diverted to the many needed tasks which occur when standards are adopted: substantial teacher and administrator learning about the standards; course and unit rewriting K-12; review, procurement, training, and adaptation of new materials; a re-creation of assessments at the state, district, and classroom levels; and retraining in educator evaluation. While standards set the foundation of the work in curriculum, instruction, and assessment, they are just that – the foundation. Like any building, if the foundation is removed or replaced, the remaining portion – the parts affecting the daily lives of those in the building – must also be rebuilt or renovated, setting back the progress of all.
2. Each change in state academic standards forces local districts and public school academies to incur substantial costs over many years. These include: costs for substitute teachers so that teachers can receive significant training, over multiple years, in the new standards and then revise or recreate courses and units, materials, and assessments; costs for summer work to continue the same, in the few districts which can afford summer work; costs for reviewing and adopting new curriculum resources; and costs for developing new assessments at all levels (state, district, classroom). Given that the standards proposed in HB 4192 are no longer in use, and are nearly 10 years old for English Language Arts and Mathematics, and 15 years old for Science and Social Studies, no currently available texts or web-based resources will have well-aligned and up-to-date content. Michigan would truly be alone in having to support all costs at all levels (state, district, classroom) for this change.
3. Changes in standards force changes in not only state assessment systems and tools, but in locally designed assessment systems and tools, and in educator evaluation. For the greatest benefit to improving learning for students, and for providing information to parents, teachers, and other interested parties, assessments must be redeveloped and redesigned each time standards are changed. The standards only tell what is to be learned. They do not indicate how students will demonstrate that knowledge and understanding, provide key indicators of proficiency, nor indicate the types of questions and tasks to present to students. Since Michigan and its schools would be alone under the proposed standards, such development and the training around the assessments will take substantial time, energy, and money. And, because of the requirements to include state and local assessment results in educator evaluation, each major change in assessment results in gap years of data for evaluation, hindering educator improvement and thus delaying improved teaching and learning for students.

Michigan Academic Standards for Mathematics Statement by Presidents of Michigan Mathematics Societies

In 2010 our Michigan State Board of Education adopted and supported a challenging set of expectations for school mathematics based on the Common Core State Standards. Built on many years of research and development, the Standards have been hailed as an auspicious advance in mathematics education by professional groups, including mathematics, mathematics education, and business associations. The standards define the mathematical knowledge and skills that students need in order to be ready for college coursework and career training. They also provide local districts the basis for developing a rigorous and relevant mathematics curriculum that is focused and coherent. When properly implemented, these high quality standards hold the promise of elevating the mathematical knowledge and skill of every student in Michigan to levels competitive with the “best in the world,” of preparing college entrants to undertake advanced work in the mathematical sciences, and of readying the next generation for the jobs their world will demand.

Dedicated school teachers and administrators, school districts, regional centers, and college and university partners have invested precious hours and tens of millions of dollars in moving these high standards from a mere vision on paper to a reality in Michigan’s classrooms. Although much work remains in order to fully implement the Standards’ vision of high quality curriculum, assessment, and teacher education programs, the work is well underway. Further, given the very limited assessment data that is available, it is far too early to draw conclusions about the Standards, their implementation, or students’ performance and growth. Changing to another set of standards would be highly disruptive at every level of education. This is not the time for Michigan to turn away from our current path.

We, the undersigned presidents of the following mathematics education and business societies, hereby express our strong support for Michigan’s current mathematics standards, and urge you to oppose any legislation that attempts to replace these standards.

Standards are only one piece of the educational landscape and they contribute only partly to the success of students. The journey that Massachusetts took to gain a foothold at the top of the nation involved far more than a set of standards (e.g. school funding changes, training, differences in demographics). An examination of this journey would likely lead to a conclusion consistent with the idea that supporting what we have properly would parallel the journey Massachusetts took. Michigan has made great strides over the past six years, we should not throw it all away.

Adopting the former MA standards is not sensible. Our current standards are founded upon research of how students build lasting understanding of concepts and proficiency with application of skills. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been invested in supporting our current standards in training and materials.

This change would set us back about a decade of work and would create unneeded countless hours of trying to learn yet another set of standards. The proposed standards were moved away from by Massachusetts, why would we want to adopt them? Our current standards were developed by representatives from our state and some of the best minds in education to date. Please respect the educated voice of those who work with the standards on a daily basis before making a political decision (for the sake of politics) on this topic. Michigan's students deserve to have their needs put first - please do what is right for them and do not change our state standards.

If Massachusetts has abandoned their standards, why would we use standards for Michigan students that were not either developed in Michigan or nationally. These standards were abandoned for a reason. Michigan students deserve better than the "cast offs" from another state.

A movement to Massachusetts standards would be an incredible set back for Michigan. We have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on professional learning and resources and are finally in a place that teachers have a stronger understanding of what instruction should include. To start this process all over again would mean we need to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars on professional learning and resources to get teachers ready to teach the new standards. In addition, the populations of Michigan versus Massachusetts vary significantly when you compare their overall socio economical status of the state Michigan has a larger lower socioeconomic population than Massachusetts. It is important to note the high correlation between lower performance and lower socioeconomic status.

This bill calls for replacing the current Michigan Academic Standards for K-12 Mathematics (as well as our English Language Arts, Social Studies, and our brand new Science standards). The replacement standards for mathematics would be the Massachusetts mathematics standards that were last used in 2008-2009 and were then abandoned by Massachusetts. The bill also calls for replacing our state testing with the Massachusetts tests from that era as well (which were also abandoned by Massachusetts). Michigan educators, parents, and citizens had no part or say in the development nor implementation of those Massachusetts standards nor tests.

If the Massachusetts standards were chosen because Massachusetts is doing exemplary work, and if Massachusetts has replaced those standards with something else, wouldn't logic dictate looking carefully at Massachusetts's new standards to see what might have been flawed in the former ones?

The educational successes of Massachusetts have less to do with their standards than how the state supports students, teachers, and districts in meeting the targets. Switching standards again will have a negative impact in Michigan as schools will have to go back to the drawing board for curricula and lessons. Check out the way Massachusetts supports learning instead of focusing solely on the standards. (By the way, MA currently uses the CCSS.)

Teachers have worked extremely hard to study and teach to the new standards. This includes a large amount of money spent in training and instructional resources purchased in districts across the state. Moreover, the current standards have many benefits like the attention to progressions of mathematical content across grades.

Stop changing the standards, and keep the Common Core! My teaching degree is in mathematics, and I have been a public school teacher for over 22 years. Listen to the math educators rather than following some political agenda!

I have devoted countless hours developing curriculum materials over the last several years that follow Common Core. Our district was finally able to afford the purchase of a new textbook that follows Common Core for our junior high students. Now the politicians are considering changing the curriculum! Give the districts a chance to fully implement Common Core for enough years to reap the benefits. It is difficult to keep aiming for a moving target.

This bill would be a major step backwards for Michigan and its students. Massachusetts abandoned it's old standards in favor of standards for ELA and math virtually identical to our current standards. Our science standards are research based and developed with input and guidance from Michigan educators and the public. Standards are only a starting point. Massachusetts far surpasses Michigan in its support for teaching and learning and has had a well thought out plan - a long term plan - for many years. They have invested for the long haul. Michigan invests when it is convenient and then only nominally. And, Michigan has a higher percentage of students living in poverty and a rather lower percent of residents with college degrees...both of which work against transplanting a model.

I don't understand why energy is continually wasted on the revisiting the need to modify the Educational State Standards. Michigan had a strong standing with the GLCE and HSCE, which were extensively vetted, that were similar to the Common Core State Standards in their ability to set a minimum State standard for educators to work toward. With the adoption of the CCSS, a national set of standards created by individual state leaders, gave Michigan a National level of standards that also passed extensive vetting. Why give up a vetted standard for a standard that was abandoned soon after they were accepted.

First, why would you move to something that has been rejected and improved upon already by another state? Second, I believe most teachers are not quite teaching to the core yet. I know it sounds ridiculous given the time frame. I have seen a large percentage of teachers in multiple counties unaware of the mathematical practices. If you're unaware of them or what they truly mean, then how can you teach with them intertwined in your content? Our kids need this time and energy devoted not to another changeover but to improved instruction and resources. The data this group is using to suggest the standards are subpar and the tests show it is misguided. It shows that the standards are not being taught in their entirety as of yet. Thank you for your time.

Strongly Opposed. While Massachusetts is in the process of updating their 2011 math and literacy standards and just completed the 2016 revision of their Science, Technology and Engineering Standards, this bill proposes to go back to standards developed 17 years ago (2000). Emulating a strong program is good but stepping backwards while they continue to strive for better doesn't make sense.

I am a teacher who believes the Common Core is in the best interest of children and I also am tired of Lansing wasting our money designing and developing and purchasing tests because you cannot make up your mind and you fail to include teachers in the discussion. How about surveying educators before you make decisions about education?

By constantly changing our standards, we have no hope of reaching any goal. Changing curriculum is not an immediate flip. It takes a great amount of time and effort, outside of time in the classroom, in order to effectively implement new standards. We need time to see Common Core through, in order to truly assess how they have worked to better educate our students. Please, as the standards have only been in place a relatively short time, please vote down HB 4192. Let us do our jobs. Thank you.

Chasing new standards will only leave us scrambling again. We need to fully develop what we have and improve our state assessment to be something that truly allows students to see their growth from year to year and to take the assessment seriously. So many students see it as something that is not graded so they don't care. I have used the NWEA MAP test and found that to be very informative.

This is a ridiculous proposal when we just getting started with new updated standards given to us just a few years ago. Why would we use a standard from another state that they themselves abandoned.

Although I do not agree with all of Michigan Standards, I do not think that adopting standards from another state is the way to go. Especially when that state already got rid of this set of proposed standards.

The standards of the common core are very rigorous. It makes no sense to go to standards that are at least 7 years old in this world that is changing so drastically. The state of Massachusetts dropped these standards to move to the Common Core state Standards. I am always frustrated with people in the state legislature feeling that they know better than those of us on the front lines of education in the state. Were any mathematics teachers consulted with these changes? I do believe that there could be changes to the standards for high school mathematics students but this is a decision that should be in the hands of the professionals.
